The New Year is for many a time for new beginnings. For the people of Louisiana, this has never been truer than in the aftermath of hurricanes Katrina and Rita. The devastating storms gave us all a new perspective on the fragile yet resilient nature of Louisiana, its people and its resources. Harsh winds and violent storm surges rendered many of our cities, forests and coasts unrecognizable.

But the rebuilding process represents a new beginning that brings with it an opportunity to foster a fresh perspective on Louisiana and its vast ecosystems.

We are pleased to present the 2006 Louisiana Conservationist calendar, featuring stunning images of Louisiana species captured up close. At first glance they, too, may seem foreign and unrecognizable. A frog's eye becomes mysterious, a butterfly wing, hypnotizing. But a simple step back reveals the familiar big picture, sometimes surprising, but altogether more interesting and suddenly more beautiful.

This year we invite you to take a closer look at Louisiana and rediscover the natural world thriving all around us, from the intricate details to the reassuring big picture.

This new perspective has given all of us at Louisiana Conservationist a new appreciation for our state and its resources. We hope these images inspire you to take a closer look at Louisiana. You'll never see it the same way again...

Happy New Year,
